

Corporate Mergers and Agile Software Development

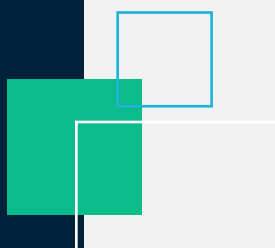

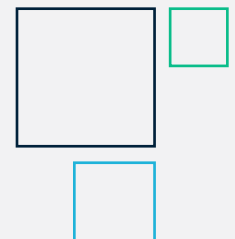

To empower one of the largest known mergers of two major telecommunications companies, Aditi supplied an agile development team to support the consolidation of mission-critical software systems from both companies. As the projects progressed, the unified company utilized Aditi expertise to move the company's software environment beyond basic data consolidation to create a comprehensive solution ready for future growth and opportunity.

The Problem

A major telecommunication company needed help to facilitate a high-profile merger with a prior rival, a huge, multifaceted process involving technology integration, network alignment, data consolidation, workflow alignment, and so on. This included merging databases containing billing data, customer information, and other business-critical information. The company had to perform this data consolidation while ensuring data integrity, privacy, and institutional compliance with government regulations.

Our Solution

To help implement data consolidation, the company turned to Aditi to create unified customer billing accounts within a modern, framework-based, Java development created in an Agile environment. Aditi also developed, maintained, and supported Amdocs billing account solutions, a key legacy solution for both companies, to manage complex billing scenarios and revenue streams. With an eye on continued industry evolution, Aditi also helped implement company-designed solutions to create unified billing to augment and eventually replace Amdocs.

The Result

Aditi's solution to consolidate critical business functions -- such as billing and revenue generation -- streamlined operations by reducing redundancies, inefficiencies, and the potential for mistakes caused by manual intervention. The newly merged company realized substantial cost savings by eliminating duplicate processes, systems, licenses, and infrastructure. Aditi also helped create a unified customer experience across the new enterprise by helping to create a single cohesive platform for payment information, invoices, and statements.
